ACKNOWLEDGMENTS: I cannot begin this book without acknowledging the people who have been of the greatest assistance to me in preparing the text. First, I must acknowledge my wife Monica and my children Ryan, Camille, Jennifer and Cristina for putting up with my relationship with my computer over the last year. Their loving sacrifice has, in no small measure, made this book possible.

I also wish to acknowledge my parents Everett, Sr., and Lillie. It is the heritage they gave which has inspired me to study and write African American history from this more global perspective. No words can convey the debt that I owe to them.

The people in my office also must be acknowledged for the support that they have given me over the course of this year while my mind has been, at times, preoccupied by this endeavor. Malcolm Hunter, Bill Bonnell, Wayne Nishioka, Judith Trice, Jack Judkins, Sheila Smith, Linda Thomas, and Leslie Shipp, thanks.

Additionally, while it may not be standard practice to acknowledge an editor from a competing book company, I am going to acknowledge Paul Bernabeo of Simon & Schuster. Mr. Bernabeo provided me with my first positive feedback as to the merits of this book and provided some helpful criticisms which I believe have helped to make this book better.

Finally, allow me to express my profound gratitude to all the fine people at McFarland. They have been instrumental in making what was once only a notion into this concrete reality.

To all of the above, thank you so very much.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Three years ago, I read William Loren Katz's Black Indians: A Hidden Heritage. For me it was an eye-opening book and for as long as I live I shall remember a line which appears on page 9 of the book. Quoting a student of African American and Indigenous American heritage, it read: "If you know I have a history, you will respect me."

As I have journeyed down the road which has led to the creation of this book, I have discovered what is, perhaps, a more profound truth. For me, and hopefully for others like me, I believe that the more accurate assessment is: "If I know I have a history, I am more likely to respect myself. And if I respect myself, I am more likely to respect others."

Katz's book, along with my 1990 Canadian trip, were the initial impetus for writing this book. However, along the way I have encountered a number of other helpful guides. Among the more essential have been Peter M. Bergman and Mort N. Bergman's The Chronological History of the Negro in America; Ellen Irene Diggs's Black Chronology; G. S. P. Freeman-Greenville's The Chronology of World History; Amiram Gonen's The Encyclopedia of the Peoples of the World; and Antony Mason, Anne Mahon, and Andrew Currie's World Facts & Places. I am also indebted to a number of dictionaries (World Book, Webster's New Collegiate) and sets of encyclopedias (World Book, Funk & Wagnall's, Encyclopaedia Britannica, Webster's New World) which have provided concise answers to questions which always seemed to crop up in the preparation of this text.

The following is a listing of some of the more significant resources relied upon in the preparation of this book:

Afro-American Encyclopedia (North Miami, Fla.: Educational Book Publishers, 1974).

In an effort to make this index as easy to use as possible, after each entry there are two references. The first reference is to the year in which the entry appears. The second reference, in parentheses, is to the specific page on which the entry appears.

Names that are European in origin are inverted and thus alphabetized by the last name of the individual. Names that are African, Arabic, or Asian are not inverted. Thus, "Muhammed Ali" appears in this index under the letter "M."

BIBLIOGRAPHY

As the writer of this book, I am indebted to the scholars who took the time and made the effort to preserve the history of individuals of African descent. I am particularly indebted to five sources of information without which this book could not have been written. Those sources are The Chronological History of the Negro in America by Peter M. Bergman and Mort N. Bergman; Chronology of African History by G. S. P. Freeman-Grenville; Dictionary of African Historical Biography by Mark R. Lipschutz and R. Kent Rasmussen; Black Firsts: 2,000 Years of Extraordinary Achievement by Jessie Carney Smith; and Biographical Dictionary of Latin American and Caribbean Political Leaders edited by Robert J. Alexander. To the authors of these sources, as well as the sources that follow, I am compelled to express my deepest gratitude.

In an effort to make this index as easy to use as possible, after each entry there are two references. The first reference is to the year in which the entry appears. The second reference, in parentheses, is to the specific page on which the entry appears.

Names that are European in origin are inverted and thus alphabetized by the last name of the individual. Names that are African, Arabic, or Asian are not inverted. Thus, "Muhammed Bello" appears in this index under the letter "M."

discover that truth and love are the salvation of mankind. For these individuals, the only meaningful quest for freedom is a quest for truth, motivated by an all too rare selfless love.

By 1929, the twentieth century had already seen its share of isms. But there would be many more to come. However, by 1929, the world would be blessed by the presence of a number of great beacons who would illuminate a bleak world during the twentieth century. These illuminating personalities who blazed across the century would provide a light of hope for all those who are on the quest for freedom – the quest for truth; and it is the exploits of these great leaders which the succeeding volumes of this chronology shall attempt to tell.

In an effort to make this index as easy to use as possible, after each entry there are two references. The first reference is to the year in which the entry appears. The second reference, in parentheses, is to the specific page on which the entry appears.

Names that are European in origin are inverted and thus alphabetized by the last name of the individual. Names that are African, Arabic, or Asian are not inverted. Thus, "Muhammed Bello" appears in this index under the letter "M."
